

Relocation

Helping people relocate is near and dear to my heart. I changed careers from being in retail upper management to real estate due to my less than positive experience when I moved to Nashville. Moving is scary enough your real estate experience shouldn't be!

My goal is to make your relocation experience as fun, stress-free, educational and time sensitive as possible. I can find you a home in an hour, a day, a week, a month whatever your time frame is I will make it happen.

I have a whole team of professionals ranging from mortgage people to closing attorneys, to handymen to cleaning women all dedicated to helping me accomplish that goal.

I know that relocation is more than just about a home it is about starting a new life, making new friends and finding new contacts. To make your move easier I provide you at closing with a list of every professional you could possibly need and if it is not on that list I will find it for you. I also conduct a girl's night out once a month for you to meet other women and make some new friendships fast.

From homes, to restaurants, to doctors, to painters, to hotels and to hot spots I have a referral so don't worry you will not be stranded after we find you your new home! I am there as much as you need me.

Quotes about Nashville

"Nashville's low cost of living and number of growing businesses helped the city earn the 13th spot in Forbes magazine's listing of cities where first-time job seekers can find success. The ranking is based on metrics for 350 of the country's metropolitan statistical areas, including the concentration of both small and large companies."

- Forbes.com, July 2009

"Readers of Travel + Leisure magazine named Nashville "America's Friendliest City" in the publication's annual ranking of 30 U.S. cities. In the same survey, Nashville also ranked second in the nation for live music and concerts, and fourth as an affordable getaway."

- Travel + Leisure magazine, October 2009

"Nashville's Belmont University was one of five schools singled out by Fortune magazine for fostering entrepreneurship. "Belmont is itself a case study in niche building: Its long-standing program in music and business is unique, and last year it became the first school to offer a major in social entrepreneurship," Fortune notes on its Web site. Fortune also cited five student-run retail businesses on Belmont's campus."

- Fortune magazine, March 2010

"Having relocated many times I am now happy to call a place that has a big city feeling mixed with affordability, a positive energy and exceptional people home." Laurie Sheinkopf